- 15> Which drink is normally strained - Martini, Tom Collins or Sling?

Answers:

- 1> Orange - Grand Marnier can be mixed with other liqueurs or it can be consumed alone. If served alone, it should be served in a brandy snifter.
- 2> Amaretto - Amaretto is made from almond pits and/or apricots. This beverage can be used in many recipes including those for chicken.
- 3> Lakka - Lakka is made in Finland. Lakka translates to mean cloudberry. This fruit is similar to a raspberry.
- 4> Vodka - This cocktail started in Ohio. Doug Schuster is credited with creating this drink.
- 5> Chartreuse - This liqueur is made from 130 herbal extracts and distilled alcohol. The name reflects the color of the liquid, which is halfway between green and yellow.
- 6> Drambuie - Drambuie is scotch and heather honey. One of the most popular cocktails made from this liqueur is a Rusty Nail.
- 7> Greyhound - A Greyhound is made using vodka and grapefruit juice. If you salt the rim, you get a Salty Dog.
- 8> Gin - In 1650, a Dutch doctor was attempting to produce a medicine. English soldiers who took this discovered its calming effects before battle. This phrase now refers to any courage gained by drinking.
- 9> Rum and water - To make the rum stores last longer, they were diluted with water.
- 10> Green - This liqueur traditionally comes from Japan.
- 11> No ice - You can also say it is straight up. Many bartending terms differ between nations and bars, as do ingredients.
- 12> Tia Maria - Kalhua is a coffee flavored liqueur. Paralyzers can also be made with rum or tequila in place of vodka.
- 13> A tall tumbler - A tall tumbler is a straight glass with a flat bottom. Many people like to have a salted or spiced rim.
- 14> Daiquiris - Daiquiris are traditionally lime, but they now come in a variety of flavors. However, even a strawberry daiquiri uses lime juice with strawberry. Fresh berries are the best.
- 15> Martini - To make a great martini you have to pour the gin into a glass with ice and then strain the contents into a martini glass. A martini should be chilled, but there is no ice in the drink when it is served.
