Answers:

- 1> Goose - John Madden popularized this food, believed to have been created by Cajuns.
- 2> Harvey Wallbanger - The Harvey Wallbanger was invented in 1952 by Donato 'Duke' Antone.
- 3> Steak - It literally means small boneless meat and it is usually from the small end of the beef tenderloin.
- 4> Flatulence - Flatulence is largely nitrogen you swallow, which your body can't absorb. Other gases, notably methane, come from the incomplete digestion of foods rich in starch or cellulose, such as beans or cabbage.
- 5> Steak Tartare - The Tartars brought it to Germany by 1300, and the Germans started calling it Hamburg steak, for the city of the same name.
- 6> Noodles - Chow mein is Cantonese for 'fried noodles' and it's a seasoned stew of shredded or diced meat, mushrooms and vegetables served with fried noodles.
- 7> Chocolate - It also has phenylethylamine, which produces love-like sensations.
- 8> Granny Smith apple - The Granny Smith is from Australia.
- 9> Gin - Dutch Gin was first used by English soldiers in the Thirty Years' War for its calming effects before battle.
- 10> Bugs Bunny - It's a traditional German stew made from marinated rabbit, braised with onions and wine in a marinade thickened with the animal's blood. Eww.
- 11> A lumbar vertebra - It is also known as porterhouse.
- 12> Atkins - The diet also urged a lot of fine steaks, meaty fish, expensive cheese and, of course, rum, vodka and gin.
- 13> Chocolate-covered turkey - Molli means 'sauce' in the old Aztec language. Hence, we have mole, which is a chocolate sauce.
- 14> Kellogg's Corn Flakes - That was John H Kellogg's idea, but his brother Will Keith added the demon sugar to the Adventist recipe.
- 15> Grey Poupon mustard - In the 1860s, Auguste Poupon financed the ideas of an English expat he met in Dijon.
- 16> Brandy Alexander - The Brandy Alexander is a variation of an earlier, gin-based cocktail called an 'Alexander'.
